CHINA ON FILM
A Century of Exploration, Confrontation, and Controversy
Paul G. Pickowicz
China on Film
China on Film

A Century of Exploration, Confrontation, and Controversy

Paul G. Pickowicz
To the UC San Diego Chinese history crew, a magnificent constellation of bright stars.

Thanks for the memories!

Emily Baum
Julie Broadwin
Jeremy Brown
David Chang
Michael Chang
Jim Cook
Madeleine Dong
Mark Eykholt
Sue Fernsebner
Josh Goldstein
Maggie Greene
Miriam Gross
Brent Haas
Chris Hess
Dahpon Ho
Ellen Huang
Jenny Huangfu
Justin Jacobs
Matt Johnson
Judd Kinzley
Liu Lu
Cecily McCaffrey
Andrew Morris
Jeremy Murray
Charles Musgrove
Amy O’Keefe
Sigrid Schmalzer
Jomo Smith
Elena Songster
Doug Stiffler
Wang Liping
Xiao Zhiwei
Elya Zhang
Zheng Xiaowei
Contents

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction: The Sorrows and Joys of Chinese Filmmaking: Political and Personal Contexts 1

1 Shanghai Twenties: Early Chinese Cinematic Explorations of the Modern Marriage 19

2 The Theme of Spiritual Pollution in Chinese Films of the 1930s 43

3 Melodramatic Representation and the May Fourth Tradition of Chinese Cinema 73

4 Never-Ending Controversies: The Case of Remorse in Shanghai and Occupation-Era Chinese Filmmaking 101

5 Victory as Defeat: Postwar Visualizations of China’s War of Resistance 121

6 Acting like Revolutionaries: Shi Hui, the Wenhua Studio, and Private-Sector Filmmaking, 1949–1952 157

8 The Limits of Cultural Thaw: Chinese Cinema in the Early 1960s 213

9 Popular Cinema and Political Thought in Early Post-Mao China: Reflections on Official Pronouncements, Film, and the Film Audience 251
Contents

10 On the Eve of Tiananmen: Huang Jianxin and the Notion of Postsocialism 271

11 Velvet Prisons and the Political Economy of Chinese Filmmaking in the Late 1980s and Early 1990s 301

12 Social and Political Dynamics of Underground Filmmaking in Early Twenty-First-Century China 325

Additional Work on Chinese Cinema 345

Index 347

About the Author 365
First and foremost, I thank Susan McEachern, my editor at Rowman and Littlefield, for working so closely with me on China on Film and for her enthusiastic support for several book projects during the last twenty years. I deeply value her sage advice and look forward to working with her yet again on Restless China, a new book that is already in the works. I also wish to thank the excellent Rowman & Littlefield staff (especially Grace Baumgartner and Alden Perkins) who labored so hard on this volume, my friend Bruce Tindell who did his usual excellent job on the index, and my fantastic student intern Kristin Shen who solved so many nagging problems.

In my introduction to China on Film I mention the names of the many film artists in China—starting with the legendary silent screen actress Wang Renmei—who helped me over the years. Spending countless hours with them discussing the sorrows and joys of their film careers was every bit as interesting as viewing their splendid movies.

My research on the history of Chinese filmmaking has been actively supported over the years by the China Film Archive, the National University of Singapore, East China Normal University, City University of Hong Kong, the University of Oxford, and, above all, my home institution, the University of California, San Diego.

This is the time and place to thank three special friends of Chinese historical studies at UC San Diego for their extraordinary generosity over the years: Martin Gleisch, John Moores, Jr., and Michael Ricks. What would we have done without them?

I have been blessed with many superb China studies colleagues at UC San Diego, including Matthew Chen, Jim Cheng, Dorothy Ko, Lu Weijing, Dick Madsen, Barry Naughton, Sarah Schneewind, Shen Kuiyi, Susan Shirk,